Date	20.07.2012	Information

Scoach Switzerland Ltd is extending its current reduction of listing fees for knock-out warrants and mini futures for another quarter. The reduction will apply for the third quarter ending 30 September 2012.

Which products are affected?

All knock-out warrants and mini futures that are traded or listed on Scoach Switzerland Ltd.

How long does the offer last?

The extension of the reduction in fees begins on 1 July 2012 and runs until 30 September 2012.

How it works in practice

Where knock-out warrants or mini futures are redeemed early within 90 days of their first trading day, issuers will be allocated additional free derivatives at a ratio of 1:1. The additional derivatives will be credited to their packages automatically with effect on 30 September 2012. The free allocation is conditional upon the issuer holding a package eligible for derivatives listing. Regardless of whether the prematurely redeemed derivative was admitted to trading within one (T+1-application) or three trading days (T+3-application), a T+1-application will be credited to the package. This principle may be applied to all product categories and expires on 31 December 2012 regardless of the normal package expiry.
